The world is trying with itself, in its effort to say a fitting word in memory of Sherman.

The Canton Repository and Alliance Review have copied an article from THE INDEPENDENT on the fees of Stark county officers, and have also included the error of exactly reversing the dates over the comparative table of salaries. Stripped of this error the table shows that the average net compensation of Stark county office-holders, in 1889 was but $2,459, while in 1890 it was $2,867.

THE INDEPENDENT has pleasure in announcing for future publication an interview with Hannibal Hamlin, the only living ex-vice president of the United States. This interview was accorded to Mr. E. J. Edwards, the well known newspaper correspondent, and is the only one of any consequence to which the sturdy old statesman ever submitted. It will be largely reminiscent of the great men of other days—contemporaries of Mr. Hamlin—and will be embellished with an excellent portrait of the gentleman who never wears an overcoat.

The chronic objector, who is never able to reconcile himself to standard time, who never knew of a train that followed its schedule, and who never discovered a decent hotel, likewise has great difficulty in accepting the predictions of the gentleman who runs the weather of the United States. Yet the truth is, the predictions come true in the great majority of instances, and when not strictly realized, the tendency is in the direction of the prognostication. In glancing upward at the flags which decorate THE INDEPENDENT building, still another circumstance should be held in mind. The report arrives about noon, and sometimes at 1 o'clock, and the forecast covers the twenty-four hours succeeding. The flags are not changed until a new report is received, and consequently from early morning until noon ought to be considered in the present tense rather than in the future. Properly interpreted, the signals are useful as well as ornamental.

Mr. Halstead has been writing from Brooklyn a series of letters on General Sherman, all very striking and full of information. In one of these he says:

"It is said by those who ought to know that the General had a feeling this winter that his days were passing, and words of his to that effect, and very specific, are freely quoted. I think it probable there is more truth in this than is usual in such cases. He was a very competent observer, and did not neglect the study of himself. One of the things he said of Winfield Scott in his last speech, was that General Scott, was a great man and a vain man, and conscious of his vanity." This was a fine touch of portrait painting, and I quote it not to say Sherman was vain, for he had no pomp about himself, but he knew himself well. He saw himself the last man of an illustrious group, the survivor of Grant and Sheridan, though he was the senior. He had seen trying times. All others who in the great war passed were his equals in responsibility were gone. The increasing fervency of expression wherever he was greeted that he might long be spared, and the incessant references to the loneliness of his grandeur, called his attention to the exceptional duration of his career, and hinted at the swiftly coming time. He was an old man conscious of his age, and when his face was in repose he was seen to be worn and weary beyond his years. Aroused, his eye kindled and his smile had all its winning good humor and genial sincerity."

GOODHART'S OPENING.

Literally thousands of visitors throng the new establishment.

The broad sidewalks surrounding Goodhart's new location swarmed with people last night, who pressed up against the great plate glass windows, and gazed at the work of art that the trimmer there had built, tantalized by the fact that the doors were still locked and barred. Schworm's orchestra secured private entrance and once tuned up and ready for operations front and rear doors were opened wide, and a procession that never was seen passed in at the Main street front, and passed out at Erie street. The store, described heretofore, looks as bright as new dollar, and Mr. Goodhart and his numerous assistants turned themselves into tapers, and did the honors with MacAllister like grace. The souvenirs, distributed from the cashier's desk were pretty and useful. There were queer colored paper novelties for the children, purses and pocket mirrors for the boys and young men, collections of views and handsome wall pockets for ladies, and collar and cuff boxes for gentlemen. Mr. Goodhart had 4,500 of these presents on hand when the store was opened, and he had 112 left this morning, leaving as a question in subtraction, the number of visitors last night, each one of whom went home with something. Goodhart's store is now doing business, and the big advertisements in THE INDEPENDENT suggest that the volume of trade is quite in proportion.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The People of St. Louis Preparing to Bury Gen. Sherman.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 19.—Meetings of the various committees having in charge arrangements for the funeral of Gen. W. T. Sherman in this city on Saturday are being held daily. Reports and suggestions are received and considered, but it is not yet definite arrangements will be made and announced until this afternoon. From advices received from cities and towns in surrounding states it is assured that large delegations of Grand Army men and Sons of Veterans will attend the funeral. It is expected that a large number of newspaper correspondents will be present and a committee has been appointed to facilitate their work. Gen. Merritt has arranged to place a squad of artillery on the levee and they will fire a salute as the funeral train passes upon the bridge across the Mississippi river. Another detachment will be placed in O'Fallon park and will fire a salute as the procession passes that point. Numerous offerings of floral tributes have been received by the committee, but in accordance with the wishes of the family and in conformity with the severe simplicity of a military funeral, there will be absolutely no flowers. After the funeral a guard will be stationed at the grave of Gen. Sherman to prevent any possible designs on the part of the unscrupulous and as a mark of honor.

Quay's Heart.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Senator Quay's sudden departure for Florida was caused by the report of his physician, Surgeon General Wales. The senator's trouble is chiefly with his heart. While his disease has not assumed an organic form, its action shows serious symptoms, and will require very great care in order to escape fatal consequences. Early in March, if he finds the climate beneficial, the senator will take a sea voyage and will be out of reach of mails for many days. He is not expecting to return to Washington until May.

The Requests Refused.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 19.—The general grievance committee of the Pennsylvania lines has received its answer from the company to its petition for an increase of wages, shorter hours and better regulations. The company declines to grant any advance of wages or allow for overtime.

Notice to Soldiers.

I will be at the Hurford House, Canton, Friday, Friday evening, Saturday, and Saturday evening, February 20 and 21, to attend to pension business under the old and new laws. Comrades, if you wish to apply for pensions under existing laws, or if you have an abandoned or rejected claim or your former attorney has neglected your case, call on me and I will help you through my personal attention to every claim. Should you fail to see me write to my address at Youngstown, O., and give me a history of your claim. C. F. CALLAHAN, U. S. Claim and Pension Agent.

Notice.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to the undersigned are respectfully and earnestly requested to make a settlement. I am in need of my money. Also on and after March 1st, 1891, will work for cash only.

C. F. Callahan, of Youngstown, O., the well known and successful pension agent, will be at the Hurford House, Canton, on Friday and Saturday, February 20 and 21, and requests all who have business in his line to call upon him at the times stated.

RISING, STILL RISING.

A BIG STREAM SCOURING THE TUSCARAWAS VALLEY.

The Lower Parts of the City are Under Water—The West Side Railroads in Worse Shape Than Yesterday, and No Sign of a Fall.

In the face of developments of the past twenty-four hours, the fact has been demonstrated that it is unwise to prophesy what the element, water, may do when at its best during a spring freshet. Yesterday all the indications were that the angry Tuscarawas would gradually recede from its defiant position and resume the customary placid demeanor within the confines of its narrow bed; but, in the present instance it disregarded all prognostications regarding its probable behavior in the near future and displayed its latent physical power by rising from five to six inches in its enlarged bed while the confiding populace slumbered last night. Even with this extension of its territory the direct damage to property cannot possibly be of any material consequence, but the novelties to persons living in the classic precincts of "Patagonia," particularly whose dwellings are surrounded, will be excessive.

That section of the city bounded by the canal, the Ft. Wayne track, Main and Cherry streets, is a most ingeniously inundated, the water being over the tops of the fences at several points. Clay street, north of the gas works, is covered with the disturbing element, rendering traveling impossible and literally paralyzes one branch of traffic conducted in that section of the city.

Official reports from the situation on the W. & L. E. are that the water continues to rise on the extension, and that not only is the depot at Warrenton, thirteen miles from Steubenville, enveloped in water to the window sills and can only be approached in boats, but the entire town is submerged. It is the conviction of the railroad officials that the track will be in running order to Dillonvale, thirty miles east of Bowerston, to-day, but the statement is not given as a prediction from this office.

The situation on the C. L. & W. road is virtually unchanged since yesterday's report in THE INDEPENDENT. It was learned to-day from an authoritative source, that at least one and one-half miles of track had been washed out in the vicinity of Freeport, seventeen miles south of Urichsville, but that from Holoway south the track has been but slightly interfered with. The damage to the affected track is not great, being confined almost exclusively to the washing away of the gravel roadbed from the track, none of the bridges being carried away. It is expected that the track will be in condition for the running of trains through to Bridgeport by Saturday.

On the Cleveland & Marietta road, from Valley Junction to the Ohio river, the invasion of water has been of such volume that not a single train has been run since last Sunday.

THE OHIO LEGISLATURE.

The Intermediate Penitentiary will be called the Ohio State Reformatory—Other Matters Discussed.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 19.—The senate passed Senator Cole's bill changing the name of the intermediate penitentiary to the Ohio State reformatory. Hodge's bill prohibiting municipal sinking fund trustees from bidding in city bonds for banks instead of for their own use passed the senate and is now a law. Sandford's house bill establishing a depository for county funds in Summit county, engaged most of the time of the senate, but it was finally postponed for next week.

What a handsome pair of bantams Ed. Kester and Tom Myers make. They should take little Johnny Shondel in also to complete the circle.

Mr. Samuel McCrary, who is employed in the foundry department, fell among the castings in the foundry yard yesterday evening in an epileptic fit. It was painful to witness his sufferings and be unable to offer any relief until the force of the stroke was spent. He was taken home in a conveyance and is not at work to-day. It was fortunate he did not injure himself in the fall.

Senator Wilson introduced a bill similar to the Erstwhile Adir law, except that it deals with bucket shop instead of saloons. The gist is that any bucket shop proprietor shall be fined from $500 to $1,000, and this penalty shall be considered a lien upon the premises in which such unlawful acts are carried on. Action can be brought against both bucket shop proprietor and owner of building jointly.

Senator Wilson introduced a bill which seeks to establish an independent fund to bear the expenses of the state railroad commissioner. It amends the Massie law, providing that the $1 per mile paid by railroads to the commissioner shall be kept as a separate fund, and not turned into the general fund of the state as now.

The following bills were introduced:

Senator Gaumer, Brady, Cole, Schenck & Ryan and Wilson are appointed a committee to attend the Sherman funeral.

After wasting an hour in quarreling over a point of order the house defeated Holliday's bill prohibiting minors from entering places where intoxicating liquors are sold—52 yeas to 29 nays, six less than a constitutional majority. The bill will probably be referred.

Senator Soncrant has introduced a bill to require all persons to be licensed to practice medicine.

Senator Hodge's bill to levy for support of indigent soldiers in various counties.

Senator Kerr, to double sentences of persons habitually convicted of misdemeanors.

Among bills passed are:

Senate bill providing for appointment of a non-partisan board of four to review the affairs of the state upon the filing of a bill of complaint by the attorney general.

Senate bill to provide for step-fathers from receiving compensation for step-children, unless he makes demand upon guardian one year.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

THE COPYRIGHT BILL HAS PASSED
THE SENATE.

Several Sharp Tiffs Between the Grave
—Mr. O'Farrell Talks Politics and Expresses Unbounded Confidence in the Integrity of Ex-President Cleveland—
The Shipping Bill Discussed and Silver Coinage King in as a Side Issue.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—In the senate yesterday, after unimportant routine business, the consideration of the copyright bill was proceeded with. Mr. Paddock gave notice that unless a vote was reached on the copyright bill before adjournment he would insist that it be laid aside and the Indian deprivations bill be taken up. Mr. Platt said that he would use every effort to have the vote taken and did not think that the consideration of the bill would occupy more than two hours. A number of pension bills were taken from the calendar and passed, including those increasing the pensions of the widows of Gens. Custer and Ullman and of Admiral Wilks to $100 per month. When the bill increasing the pension of Mrs. Custer was read Mr. Plumb inquired if the pensions of the widows of private soldiers had been considered by the committee on pensions. Mr. Davis, chairman of the committee, said that the committee had not had any occasion to express an opinion upon it. Mr. Plumb—Then I am bound to suppose that the widows of private soldiers have not yet come within the purview of that committee. The copyright bill was again taken up, the pending question being on the Sherman amendment to admit copyrighted books, etc., printed in foreign countries on the payment of tariff duties. It was agreed to—yeas, 36; nays, 24. Mr. Frye renewed his amendment requiring maps, dramatic or musical compositions, engravings, cuts, prints, photographs, chromos or lithographs to be printed from plates executed in the United States. In the course of the debate on the amendment Mr. Wolcott intimated that Mr. Plumb's views on art and artistic and literary property might suit the ideas of the state of Kansas, but were not generally accepted elsewhere.

Mr. Plumb retorted that such a remark did not become the senator from Colorado, and that when the time came for them to hang out their soiled linen on the national clothes line he (Plumb) could say as many mean things about Colorado as could be said about Kansas, even if the majority of the population of Colorado had come from Kansas. Mr. Frye's amendment was agreed to—yeas, 41; nays, 24. Mr. Ingalls moved to strike out the proviso allowing the publisher of a newspaper or magazine to import two copies of any newspaper or magazine published in a foreign country and to insert in lieu thereof the following: "And except in the case of newspapers and periodicals which are hereby exempted from prohibition of importation." Agreed to.

A number of other amendments were offered, but were rejected, and after much discussion, a vote on the bill was reached and it was passed—yeas, 36; nays, 14. On motion of Mr. Platt a conference was asked on the disagreeing votes of the two houses, and Messrs. Platt, Hiscock and Gray were appointed conferees on the part of the senate. The third section of the bill, in which the most important changes have been made, requires a printed copy of the title of the copyrighted book or map to be mailed or delivered to the librarian of congress on or before the day of publication. It provides that in the case of a book, map, dramatic or musical composition, engraving, cut, print, photograph, chromo or lithograph, the two copies of the same (required to be deposited in the library of congress) shall be printed from type set within the United States or from plates made therefrom, or from engravings, cuts, negatives or drawings on stone executed within the United States. The importation of copyrighted books, maps, engravings, etc., printed abroad is prohibited, except in the case of persons purchasing for use, and not for sale; and except that copyrighted works of foreign authors may be imported on payment of tariff duties. Newspapers and periodicals are exempted from prohibition of importation. The senate bill for the erection of a new custom house in the city of New York was passed.

The following bills were also passed: House bill amending the act of July, 1881, dividing the state of Iowa into two judicial districts. Senate bill to provide the times and places of holding terms of the United States courts in Idaho. The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the substitute for the house bill to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian deprivations. Mr. Edmunds moved to strike out section 3 of the substitute, which prohibits the allowance of any claim made by Indians on the testimony of any witness of the Indian race. The vote was taken on Mr. Edmund's motion to strike out the third section and it resulted, yeas, 22; nays, 1, lacking one of a quorum.

A motion to adjourn was defeated, and under the general order of two weeks ago the senate, at 6 p. m., took a recess until 8 p. m., the sergeant-at-arms being directed in the meantime to request the attendance of absent senators.

At the evening session of the senate thirty-five members were present, and after discussing the report of the sengeant-at-arms on absentees until 9:30 a. m. to adjourn was carried.

In the House.

The house yesterday, in the absence of the speaker, elected Mr. Payson, of Illinois, as speaker pro tem. Conferences were ordered on the District of Columbia and the military academy appropriation bills. The house then proceeded to the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill. The amendment to carry into effect the allotment agreement with the Coeur d' Alene and other tribes of Indians was agreed to and the bill was passed.

A joint resolution was passed appropriating $105,000 for printing 100,000 copies of the report on diseases of horses, prepared under the supervision of the chief of the bureau of animal industry. The house then went into committee of the whole on the postage appropriation bill. In the general debate Mr. Blount, of Georgia, took position against the shipping bill on the ground that all efforts to build up the merchant marine by means of subsidy would prove futile so long as the present high rates of duty were maintained. Mr. Simonds, of Connecticut, spoke in support of the shipping bill, advocating the fostering of the shipping interests by generous aid.

Mr. Cummings, of New York, addressed himself to an advocacy of the resolution protesting against the persecution of the Jews in Russia. He had the kindest feeling toward the government of Russia, which had always shown itself friendly toward the United States; but he thought it was the duty of this country to inform Russia of the outraged sentiments of mankind.

Mr. O'Ferrall, of Virginia, submitted an argument against the shipping bill. In the course of his remarks he touched upon the silver question, and in response to a question by Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, as to the position of Mr. Cleveland upon that subject, he declared that Grover Cleveland was deeper down in the heart of the Democracy of the country than any other living man. Whatever Mr. Cleveland's position might be to-day on the question of silver coinage, when the national convention spoke in 1892, he would endorse the principles of their platform, whatever they might be. He did not believe that Mr. Cleveland would surrender his convictions, but there were questions of Democratic principle far paramount to the question of the free coinage of silver. Without disposing of the bill, the committee rose and the house adjourned.

LATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

It snowed at Salt Lake City Monday night and a peculiar feature of the snow storm was a large quantity of salt which fell with it. The snow melted and left the salt on the ground, at least one-fourth of an inch in thickness. The salt was evidently absorbed from the lake.

Ex-Secretary Gibson, of the Whisky trust, walked into Judge Shepard's court, Chicago, Wednesday and gave $25,000 for his appearance in court, Thomas Hutchinson, secretary of the Chicago Distilling company, and George T. Burroughs, secretary of the Phoenix.

While two men were engaged in painting the exterior of an artificial ice vat at the Diamond Ice company's establishment, Williamson, Del., Wednesday, the patent paint which they were using exploded, and they were frightfully burned. Their names are Joseph Kirby and James Kennedy. The latter will die.

The question has been raised over the legality of Kyle's election to the United States senate from South Dakota. The claim is made that the constitutional requirement provides that the majority of the members of the legislature is necessary, which would necessitate Kyle's receiving 85 votes, whereas he received only 75.

Gen. Sibley, pioneer and first governor of the state, died at his home in St. Paul, Wednesday. He had been lingering near the verge of the grave for some time, and for nearly six hours prior to death was unconscious. Death came so suddenly that those around his bedside scarcely knew when his soul was called away.

Between thirty and forty human skeletons have been exhumed by the workmen engaged in excavating the foundation of the new Methodist Chapel at the corner of Forty-second and street and Berkely avenue, Chicago. These relics were taken in charge by the police. Lieut. Cain, who is something of an antiquarian, said he believed that the bones were those of a tribe of Indians who were exterminated by the whites and were buried there.

Another Bank Failure.

TOPEKA, KAN., Feb. 19.—The John D. Knox & Co. banking house closed its doors yesterday. The liabilities are said to be $250,000. The assets are principally land equities, unpaid coupons, bills discounted, tax sale certificates, etc. The total value of the assets cannot definitely be determined, but Mr. Knox claims that at a fair valuation they will aggregate $450,000. The failure is the result of acquiring land that there is now no demand or sale for.

The Decision Sustained.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—In the suit of Boyd, Sutton & Co. for a review of the board of appraisers' decision in reference to an importation of laces and silks, Judge Lacombe, in the United States circuit court, yesterday, affirmed the decision of the appraisers. The suit was brought to test the constitutionality of certain features of the McKinley tariff act.

THE WATERS SUBSIDE.

A COLD WAVE CHECKS THE RAGING FLOOD.

The Highest Point was Reached About Noon Yesterday, After which the Tide Began to Ebb—Great Damage Done at Pittsburg and All Along the Valleys of the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio Rivers—Thirteen Thousand Men Out of Employment.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 19.—The rivers are falling and the danger from the flood is about over. The Monongahela and Allegheny rivers rose rapidly during Tuesday night and by yesterday morning both Pittsburg and Allegheny City were flooded for several blocks back from the river. On the streets nearest the water front the houses were submerged to the second stories. All communication between Allegheny City and Pittsburg and between the South Side and the business center of this city, except by boat or rail, was cut off. The fires were quenched in the mills all along the river bank and at least 13,000 persons were thus thrown out of employment. The damage done to property cannot be estimated, but it will reach far up into the thousands of dollars.

At noon yesterday the Monongahela had risen 31 feet and 3 inches and became stationary. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the Allegheny registered 32 feet and 11 inches and was still slightly on the rise. Then both rivers began to subside, and this morning many of the buildings were free from water on the first floor, some of the streets were passable and the work of repairing the damage done had commenced.

The most serious accidents that have resulted from the high water have been caused by natural gas explosions. On Tuesday evening the boarding house of Mrs. Hubbard, in Allegheny City, was wrecked by an explosion. Five persons were seriously injured, among them being Misses Florence and Mary Martin, the Albino beauties, who were being exhibited at the World's museum. Their luxuriant white hair was badly singed and they were severely burned about the face and hands. The gas had been left burning in a stove in the basement kitchen, the water flooded the room and put out the fire. Then the escaping gas accumulated and the explosion followed. The house was completely wrecked.

Three houses in Pittsburg known as the Shoenerberger cottages were wrecked in a similar manner and a man named Anderson, who caused the disaster by carrying a lighted lamp into the cellar, is dangerously, if not fatally, injured. The slackening of lime by the water caused a fire in Allegheny yesterday that destroyed the Hunter Lime works. The people of Allegheny have been put to much inconvenience by the flooding of the gas works, which has left nearly all the private dwellings in darkness.

Along the Valleys.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., Feb. 19.—The Susquehanna river at noon yesterday was a little over twenty-one feet and will probably not rise more than a foot higher. The weather is colder and the rain has ceased. The tracks of the Reading and Beech Creek railroads in this city are under water for some distance. A number of logs went down the stream during the night, but the loss will not be heavy. The danger is believed to have passed.

LOCK HAVEN, PA., Feb. 19.—A portion of this city was overflowed yesterday as the result of a flood in the Bald Eagle creek, which is within two feet of being as high as in 1889. The business part of the town was not flooded. The river commenced falling at noon, having reached the twelve-foot mark without doing any damage here.

BUTLER, PA., Feb. 19.—Isabella Young, aged 8, Donegal township, while on her way from school fell from a footbridge and was drowned. The body was found in some driftwood a short distance from the bridge.

KITTANNING, PA., Feb. 19.—Nearly the whole town at Ford City is under water. A portion of the glass works is under water, and work has been suspended in all departments.

BEAVER FALLS, PA., Feb. 19.—The high water has put out the fires in the water works and stopped the pumps. Fearing there may be a water famine, mills have been compelled to shut down. At Fairstown, a mile below this place, all the mills and factories are closed.

FREEPORT, PA., Feb. 19.—All of the lower part of the town from below Fourth street down is submerged. The Guckenheimer distillery had to close down. The water works pump house is under water.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., Feb. 19.—A flood is now reported on the headwaters of Pine creek at Galeton. On that creek a boom broke, letting between 8,000 and 10,000 feet of logs escape.

SCOTTDALE, PA., Feb. 19.—The National Pipe works were forced to suspend operations yesterday.

INDIANA, PA., Feb. 19.—In the Two-Lick creek 2,000,000 feet of logs have come booming down.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 19.—Eight persons had a narrow escape from drowning at the Union railroad bridge. A trading boat containing four men, one woman and two children was blown against a pier. The occupants were saved from the wreck by the crew of the Climax just in the nick of time.

The Whisky Trust Adjourns.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—Miss Phoebe Price, 17 years old, was accidentally killed yesterday afternoon by falling sixty feet down an elevator shaft in the Chamber of Commerce building, from the Fifth to the ground floor. James Black, the man in charge of the elevator, neglected to close the door. Miss Price leaned forward to peer down the open well, and losing her balance fell to the bottom. Her body was terribly mutilated. Black surrendered to Police Lieutenant Ross and will be held pending an investigation of his carelessness.

BASEBALL CONFERENCE.

A New President is Elected and Much Other Good Work Done—Lively Times May be Expected.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—A sensible move taken by the American association at its meeting yesterday was the adoption of a guaranteed fund. Fifty-five per cent. of the stock of each club will be deposited with the president to prevent any jumping from the fold. This will most effectively block all efforts of the league to injure the association by seeking for the withdrawal of any of the clubs. The conditions of the funds are such that it will bind the clubs for nine years.

At the meeting in the afternoon C. Jones, Charles Snyder, John Kelly and J. F. Macular were selected as umpires for the season. A telegram was received from Mr. Kramer last evening accepting the position of president of the association. He will also act as secretary and treasurer. Al Johnson announced last evening that Dan Brouthers and Bill Daly had signed with the Boston association team. It was also given out that Pat Tebeau had signed to play third base for the Cincinnati team.

A conference of the association was commenced in the Murray Hill hotel at 11:30 p. m. Tuesday and held a continuous session until morning. It was moved and seconded that the office of president be declared vacant and that the association withdraw from the National agreement. The motion was received with cheers and carried unanimously. Yesterday morning a secret session was held to select a new president and make alterations in the constitution.

The committee appointed at the conference to select a successor to President Thurman reported in favor of Louis Kramer, of Cincinnati.

CUT DOWN.

The Bark Mascot Sunk by the Steamer Havel.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The new North German Lloyd steamer Havel, which left Hoboken at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon for Bremen struck the incoming Italian bark Mascot when off Bay No. 29 and sent her to the bottom. The Havel was proceeding under half steam, but the force of the ebb tide sent her through the bay at a pretty rapid rate. With almost full headway the steamship struck the inward bound vessel almost amidships, cutting her in two. The bark sunk in thirty feet of water. The vessel was off Bay Ridge when the Havel struck her. While the steamship was backing off several of her boats were lowered and all of her crew were saved. Two boys, who shipped on the bark at San Domingo seventeen days ago, were lost. The Havel's boats transferred the crew to the tug Tallman and the revenue cutter Manhattan, which brought the survivors to this city. The Havel proceeded after rescuing the crew.

MURDER IS THE CHARGE.

Opening of the Trial of Teeters—Four Jurors Secured.

WASHINGTON, PA., Feb. 19.—George Teeters, the man charged with the murder of Mrs. Saunders at Toledo, this county, last October, was put on trial yesterday. The defendant, when brought before the court, appeared perfectly cool, and pleaded not guilty. The work of securing a jury was then begun, and at 12 o'clock the following jurors had been accepted: James C. Christy, Oliver M. Linton, F. J. Baird and Dewas Baker. In securing these jurors over half the venire was called and eight peremptory challenges were made by the defense. Mrs. Teeters, the mother of the accused, sat beside her son all the morning. Col. Arnett, of Wheeling, and J. M. Braden, of Washington, represent Teeters.

CHANGES IN CONGRESS.

WHEN THE PRESENT SESSION CLOSES
MANY WILL GO OUT.Walter Wellman Writes Entertainingly and Instructively of the Men Who Will Then Retire and Those Who Will Come in to Take Their Places.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Two weeks hence this congress will expire, and a wholesale exodus of statesmen will occur. Some of those who go will never return, while others may sooner or later be seen in their old seats. One of the interesting phases of life in Washington is this procession of coming and going statesmen, this fleeting show of ambition gratified and pride humbled. Few men have been so great or strong as to be safe from the assaults of rivals or the changes of public opinion. There are examples in our history of popularity which never waned, and which was strong and steady enough to give its happy possessors life leases of congressional seats.

But such instances are rare, and every other March 4 brings to our view in the house and senate a large number of men long familiar to the public eye standing gipsach in hand, railroad tickets in their pockets, ready to return to their homes and private life. Never before was there such a large number of retiring members of the house—175, or more than one-half of the total number of representatives, dropping out at the end of this congress. In the senate there are many to go, but not so many as on other similar occasions. Twelve senators retire March 4. They are Blair of New Hampshire, Evarts of New York, Hampton of South Carolina, Brown of Georgia, Eustis of Louisiana, Payne of Ohio, Farwell of Illinois, Spooner of Wisconsin, Moody of South Dakota, Pierce of North Dakota, McConnell of Idaho, and Ingalls of Kansas.

A greater number of senators have left the chamber in a single day in the past, but it is said that the ancient and honorable body never lost so many of its prominent and able members at one fell swoop. In one group we see four famous old men—Payne, Hampton, Evarts, Brown. Their combined age is 297 years. Mr. Payne at 81 is a lively old gentleman. At was nearly sixty years ago that he began the practice of law. He is one of the few men that have sat six years in congress without making a speech. But if Mr. Payne has not shone as a debater he has been a good listener.

No senator has been in more constant attendance than he, and while in the chamber he likes nothing better than to sit in his chair an intent and alert observer of the proceedings. In Wade Hampton and William Maxwell Evarts the public service loses two of its greatest and most interesting figures. Each is 73 years old, and Mr. Evarts will in a few days celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his admission to the bar. What a distinguished career is now to be brought to a close! Half a century, nearly, one of the foremost lawyers of his time, attorney general of the United States, counsel for President Johnson in the famous impeachment trial, counsel before the Geneva claims tribunal, counsel for President Hayes before the electoral commission, of which his friend and retiring brother senator, Mr. Payne, was a member, secretary of state and senator.

Mr. Brown, at 70, is the youngest of the quartet, though the oldest in appearance. He has not been in his seat this winter, but is said to be as active as ever in business. It is nearly thirty-five years since he was elected governor of his state, and he has been prominent before the public eye ever since. One of the coincidences of this ever coming and going procession of public men is found in the fact that Governor Brown succeeded Gen. Gordon eleven years ago, and now Gen. Gordon succeeds Governor Brown.

In Ingalls and Eustis the senate loses two of its greatest orators and most interesting characters. No man in congress has been more talked, written and gossiped about during the past ten or twelve years than John James Ingalls. His quaint figure, his statuesque manners, his rhetoric, his wit have moved many tongues and pens. What the newspaper writers will do without Ingalls, at whom shall the Capitol guides point the gaze of their customer, the curious stranger, are conundrums of the hour. Minus Ingalls the senate will lose much of its attractiveness, and the scribes are hoping his successor, Judge Peffer, will prove to be as interesting in his way as the departing senator. Ingalls has been eighteen years in the senate, and he and Samuel C. Pomeroy, his predecessor, filled one seat during the entire thirty years that have elapsed since Kansas was admitted to the Union.

Another picturesque figure soon to depart is that of Mr. Blair. With all his peculiarities, a more earnest, conscientious man never sat in the senate. Mr. Blair leaves the senate even poorer in purse than when he came to it, twelve years ago, practically without a dollar in the world. Could one leave a better record behind him? In these twelve years Mr. Blair has introduced more bills, made more speeches, filled a greater number of pages of The Congressional Record than any of his colleagues. His industry has been marvelous. He has also suffered the greatest disappointments. Few if any of his plans for the amelioration of the evils which beset the human race have found their way to the statutes, and the final defeat of his great educational bill, after ten years of labor and advocacy such as no other measure in congress ever had from its devoted author, was a twentyfold harder blow to Mr. Blair than his failure to win a re-election.

In Mr. Eustis the senate loses not only an orator of great power, but one of its most popular members and its finest French scholar. Mr. Eustis can speak just as eloquently in French as in English, and he is, perhaps, the only man now in public life who subscribes for and reads the leading Parisian magazines and reviews, and who makes an effort to "keep up" with current French literature. Senator Eustis has been noted as the best natured and most indolent man in congress. "I plead guilty," he said the other day, "to the first part of the indictment, but not to the latter. At any rate, I am not so lazy as to preclude my going back to Louisiana and hustling for a seat in the house of representatives." This will not be the first time Mr. Eustis has retired from the senate, and his friends say it will not be the last.

THIS COUNTRY AN EXPERIMENT.

And now after twenty-five years of peace, what do we see as a result of the failure of the rebellion? A nation nearly double the population it then had, a large increase in the number of states within the union, a nation all free, stronger, happier and more prosperous than ever before. America is an experiment. Such a nation never before existed. True there have been republics and commonwealths, but none of the extent of America geographically and where personal liberty is so thoroughly recognized.

The experiment was inaugurated by the heroes of the revolution, more than a hundred years ago. * * * When the pirate flag of rebellion was unfurled and the moment of trial came, the Genius of Liberty uttered a silent voice that thrilled through the hearts of the millions of her sons, and inspired by the spirit of heroic devotion to duty, to self, from Wisconsin has been in the senate only six years, but in that short period, as senatorial careers go, he has managed to climb a good many rounds of the ladder, and retires one of the most influential members of the body. The secret of his success is a very simple one—work. If there is a senator who has worked harder than "Little Spooner," as he is called, his name does not readily occur to one who is tolerably familiar with senators and their ways, as a member of one of the most onerous committees of the senate, the committee on claims.

Mr. Spooner has had thrown upon him enough work for two or three men of his size. Some people entertain the notion that senators do not work, but Spooner has for years sat up two or three nights a week till near dawn studying at claims cases, bringing to bear upon them an industry and a lawyer's painstaking investigation and analysis which would have cost Uncle Sam very fat retainers and fat fees were he a private individual and the senator his legal adviser. Uncle Sam is not as thrifless as he is said to be, for he pays his lawyers but $5,000 a year, and out of many of them, like "little Senator Spooner," he manages to get $30,000 worth of work.

Three of the retiring senators, Pierce, Moody and McConnell, are new men, who came in with the new states in the new west. All are young men, as senators go, and may be expected to show their faces here again ere many years have passed. The last named, indeed, had not, when word was received from him a few days ago, abandoned hope of being his own successor. Mr. Farwell's retirement will be generally regretted in the senate chamber. Not a brilliant senator, one who never makes speeches, he leaves behind him a very good record as a worker. He is the most candid, blunt speaking man the senate has known for a long time. In an atmosphere which inculcates in many men a love of mystery and secretiveness, he has grown in candor till he is known as the statesman without a secret.

Old habits of the capital say they never saw a more interesting group than the dozen we have been writing about clear out their desks, pick up their hats and leave the senate chamber together. It is recalled by an observer that the greatest exodus ever known from the senate was at the end of the Forty-third congress, when no fewer than twenty men, or more than one-fourth of the whole number, retired to private life. That was only sixteen years ago, yet how many of those retiring senators are already forgotten. Few of them, indeed, are still alive, and of their successors only three out of a score are now in the senate.

ALL HONOR TO SHERMAN.

mean? Who could suppose, until after the bloody and disastrous affairs of the first year or two that the war was so near being as described by General Sherman himself when he said, "War is h—."

The South meant business of the most fiery real character, and Sherman knew it. He had a military mind broad enough to cover the ground and understand the demands of the occasion. Hence his request, supposed to be so unreasonable—for 60,000 men now and 200,000 before we are done, and the report went abroad that Sherman was crazy; and he soon found himself relieved of his command and ordered to report at St. Louis to General Halleck. But it was that kind of insanity and the peculiar liquor used by General Grant while he was tanning the hides of the rebels along the Mississippi river that brought the war to a happy issue at last. * * *

SHERMAN THE PATRIOT.

General Sherman endorsed and loved his country as he found it, a united country, happy in the strength that gave—prosperous under the benign institutions which the fathers had created, and gave his services and offered his life for the preservation of his country. And now, while we are here to do respect to the memory of the man, the soldier, the patriot, that is dead, let us use the occasion for a quickening of our own patriotism lest we forget to appreciate the services of such men in forgetting to appreciate for which they jeopardized their lives.

The war which Sherman fought was not a war that had for its end the humiliation of a neighboring nation, nor the spoliation of another's territory. It was for the preservation of the union of the states, and all that that implies. The maintenance of the principles of personal freedom, self government and the equality of man. What meant the success of the rebellion but slavery to black and white? Every man that by his influence endorsed the sentiment of the South and conducted her armies, was a despot—a tyrant.

So far as the "democratic principles upon which our government is founded are concerned, had the rebellion proven a success, they would have ceased to exist in the southern half of our continent and how long do you suppose the two nations could have lived side by side in peace, so diverse in the genius and forms of government?

The senior proprietor of this paper has been subject to frequent colds for some years, which were sure to lay him up if not doctor'd at once. He finds that Chamberlain's Cough remedy is reliable. It opens the secretions, relieves the lungs and restores the system to a healthy condition. If freely used as soon as the cold is contracted, and before it has become settled in the system, it greatly lessens the attack and often cures in a single day what would otherwise have been a severe cold.—Northwestern Hotel Reporter, Des Moines, Iowa. 50 cent bottles for sale by Morganthaler & Heister.

A Good Record.—"I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for ten years," says druggist E. B. Legg, of Vail, Ia., "and have always warranted it and never had a bottle returned.
